Relay Race To Decide Track Title Today Varsity Leading 60-57

McGill Still Has Outside Chance of Winning Meet — Cummings Breaks Record by Hurling Javelin 159 Feet 2½ Inches — Drew is Individual Winner With Three Firsts in Hurdles, High Jump and Broad Jump — Toronto Strong in Sprints.

(Special to McGill Daily)

By Lou Golden, Associated Editor, The Varsity.

Toronto, Oct. 18.—The University of Toronto track and field team put all but the finishing touches on the trophy for intercollegiate competition yesterday afternoon at the Varsity Stadium when they gathered in 60 points to 57 of McGill. Queen's were a poor third with 5 points. McGill's one remaining opportunity for the title is that of getting a first in the relay at half time to the Varsity-McGill football game while Varsity gets a third. That is not likely as the Queen's relay outfit is a poor one and the blues have a smart set of men for the relay, men that have defeated McGill in their events here yesterday.

The meet attracted one of the largest crowds that have attended a track meet in some years with about 2,000 spectators being on hand. Charlie Drew of McGill was the individual winner with three firsts in the hurdles, the high jump and the broad jump.

There was one record broken that of the javelin. Cummings of the Red stronghold doing the trick stepping up from the old record of 153 feet 4½ inches to that of 159 feet 2½ inches.

Ralph Adams of the Olympic team won two firsts, taking the century in nice style in the record equaling time of 10 seconds flat. He also won the 220 yard dash. Jermyn was another outstanding performer with a handy win in the 880 and a second in the 440 yard.

Third Year Meds Dine A La Mode

Class Dinner Featured at Krausman's Last Night

The class of Medicine '32 gathered in strength and spirits last night, to celebrate with banquet and song in Krausman's Cafe the joy of a new year in each other's company. Beyond the reach of the sophomore-freshman banquet that has marked the opening days of previous years, they made the occasion sufficient unto itself for a feast of soul and reason which Bill Winter, father of the class and oldest living undergraduate, did not attempt to quell.

Dr. Beatty and Dr. Dreyer, popular professors of freshman and sophomore days, were guests of honour at the head table and threw a distinctive note into the proceedings when they drew on their store of experience and knowledge with a wealth of reminiscence designed to be of value to the students in their contacts outside the direct sphere of medical work. Appropriate replies were made by Thompson and Randazzo. Thompson took a serious attitude towards their remarks, while Randazzo adopted a more personal note.

Bus Tarbox, supported by and supporting Gordie Petrie, appeared unexpectedly on chairs a intervals, leading songs long since dead and buried until resurrected by the grave-diggers. Under their energetic leadership ever and anon the battle cry of the class startled the air and the outside world.

Class presidents present and past in the person of Fred Mott, Frank Horsfall, and Al Fleming occupied the three remaining posts of peril at the head table. The precarious balancing of the cheerleaders would have rendered their positions ones of somewhat

Sir Arthur Currie at Affair on November 7th

Sir Arthur Currie is expected to be present as guest of honor at the monster Arts undergraduate banquet which will be held on Thursday evening, November 7th at 7 o'clock in Queen's Hotel. This is eight days later than previously announced. About thirty members of the staff and representatives from four of the universities of eastern Canada are being invited as guests.

The banquet is essentially a freshman affair. Each first year man will have the privilege of paying three dollars which will cover the cost of a ticket for a sophomore and for his own pasteboard. Those of the second

Rhodes Scholar Saturday Night Club Speaker

H. Pitts-Brown, Rhodes scholar from New Zealand, will be the guest at the weekly meeting of the Saturday Night Club, which takes place in Strathcona Hall, tonight at eight p.m. It is expected that, in the course of his informal talk, the speaker will touch on the League of Nations, in which he is keenly interested, Empire Relations, and his native land, New Zealand.

While at Oxford, Mr. Pitts-Brown studied History. He has completed his term there and is now on his way home. He has been spending the past few days here.

The opening meeting of the Saturday Night Club was held last week, when C. F. Andrews, of India, led a discussion on racial problems.

Tea Room Will Not Operate

Lack of Patronage is Reason, Says Cordner

CAFETERIA SUCCESS

Short Order Range Aids Service—400 Customers Daily

Lack of sufficient patronage last year to the Tea Room is the reason for not opening it this year, said R. L. Cordner, manager of the Union Cafeteria, in an interview with a Daily reporter yesterday.

The Tea Room was opened a year ago for the first time as an experiment. Because of the novelty, this being the first time girls were admitted to the Union, it proved successful for a while. But later in the year patronage fell off to such an extent that it was operated at a loss.

To the service made possible by the newly installed short order range, Mr. Cordner attributes the success enjoyed so far this year by the cafeteria. This range speeds up the service of small orders such as eggs, which can now be cooked to order. The cafeteria is serving more than 400 students a day.

During the summer the Cafeteria was entirely renovated. The walls and ceilings were calcimined and the tables and chairs were varnished.

The staff is entirely changed, the cafeteria being under the management of R. L. Cordner of Cordners Ltd. New and up-to-date equipment has been installed in the kitchen.

Beginning almost immediately the management intends trying out a different method in serving meats. Beef will be served one day, veal the next and so on in rotation. Fish will be served on Fridays besides the regular meats. The more the students patronize the Cafeteria the better are the foods as they remain less time on the warming trays.

Women Organize Study Groups

Discussions on Various Topics Start Monday

The study-groups of the R.V.C. branch of the S.C.A. are beginning in full swing on Monday. A large number of freshettes have signed up for these, and a very successful year is expected, by the convenors.

Two groups have been formed especially for these new students. Mr. C. M. Stewart, general S.C.A. secretary, is taking a group on books written by Cockin. This group will meet Tues. at 4 o'clock. Miss Marjorie Trotter will lead another group Monday at 4 o'clock on Bruce Curry's "Jesus and his Cause." Two groups led by Marjorie Bradford and Marjorie Bourke will take "The Social Principles of Jesus" as their theme. These studies will involve some practical work as well as discussion. Miss Bourke's group will meet Tuesday at 4 o'clock and Miss Bradford's Wednesday at 4.

Mr. Bob Scott has consented to lead a discussion of the Life of Paul, the time of which will be announced later. Mary Binmore the new Women's S.C.A. secretary has as her group a number of seniors studying "Jesus in the Records." It is also planned to have a group of M.S.P.E. women.

Any woman interested in these groups or the formation of others should get in touch with Dorothy Aiken, or Marjorie Tennant, both of R.V.C. '30.

Study Groups Will Assemble Monday

Dr. L. C. Douglas and Professor J. A. Coote Leaders

Dr. L. C. Douglas' study group for freshmen, on the "Development of Personality," and Professor J. A. Coote's group, interesting itself mainly in the discussion of economic questions, will meet for the second time on Monday. The First Year men will assemble at five o'clock in Strathcona Hall, while the second group, which is to discuss "Wages and the Cost of Living," will gather at the same place at 9.15 p.m.

According to C. M. Stewart, Secretary of the Student Christian Association, there are still plenty of openings for new men in both these study courses.

S.V.M. Kingston Meet Reported By Delegates

Phases of Mission Work Described to Group

3 MISSIONARIES

Veterans From India and Japan Aid Success of Conference

Loyal support from student volunteers is essential for the financial success of the S.V.M., said Ruth Low at the first meeting of the Mission Study Group in Strathcona Hall yesterday afternoon. Miss Low presented the first of several reports on the Student Volunteer Convention held in Kingston last week-end. In her general report, she said that five-sixths of the money required comes from friends outside the movement.

The relation of the S.V.M. group to other organisations on the Campus was explained by Daniel Munn. He reported that this topic attracted much attention at the Kingston meeting. The highest ideals and ultimate success of the S.C.A. and the S.V.M. work can only be attained by co-operating with and stimulating interest in the Christian Church.

How the Reverend Mr. Netram, a native son of India, spoke of his great country shackled and fettered in a five-fold bondage: economic, social, mental, political, and spiritual, was told by W. A. Stewart. It was point-

Remarkable Fashions Are Seen At The Union House Informal

By Izzie and Lizzie

US TWO SHY THINGS found ourselves commanded by the Assignment Book to "cover" the Informal Dance which took place in the Union Ballroom last night. Being dutiful reporters we proceeded at the appointed hour to the Union but alas, we had no tickets and the most horrible person at the door distilled most dreadfully, "No tickee, no washee! See the Union House Committee!"

Another alas!

But we had to get material for copy and we crawled three stories of slippery-fire escapes to get it!

Dear reader, imagine yourself with us. Imagine viewing a galaxy of girls dressed in the most modern shades of vermillion and the latest ultra-violet. Imagine seeing hundreds of youthful students sporting fantastic ties and infra-red shoes. If you had seen these you would appreciate our astonishment and amazement.

Miss Jean Forbes wore a gorgeous creation in extorted calico, trimmed with beige tulle. Miss Barbara Knowlton was stunning in a gown of reversible printed crepe-de-China. Miss Beatrice Chisholm charmed the guests in a Nile green chiffon gown, period style. Miss Fairlie MacArthur was present in a frock with an uneven skirt shirred in scallops, and with an extraordinary kerchief effect. Miss Vera Shlakman looked beautiful in a home-made dress of Pickin cotton. Miss Dot Cushing flared up, excuse please, wore

Large Traffic Squad for Street Parades—Red Sweaters

2.45 p.m. on Monday afternoon will mark the historic moment when McGill University will grant the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws to Great Britain's great Labour premier. Lectures after one o'clock are cancelled so that all students will be able to assemble in front of the Principal's house, 3450 McTavish St., to greet the premier in the rousing McGill way. A force of one hundred policemen will handle the expected crowd. As students will take certain privileges, they are asked to wear their red sweaters as a distinguishing mark.

After addressing a meeting in the Canadian Club, the Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald will proceed to the residence of Sir Arthur Currie, at 3450 McTavish St. Then he will accompany Sir Arthur Currie to the Arts building where the degree will be conferred in Moyse Hall.

The McGill Debating Union Society will confer an honorary membership in the Society upon the illustrious visitor. This honour is conferred upon men of distinction in public life, the Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald being the first to receive this honour since the foundation of the society, fifty years ago. The British premier is expected to speak in Moyse Hall after the convocation ceremony, and microphones have been installed there leading to loudspeakers installed in the hall and on the steps of the Arts

New Constitution On Vote Sunday

League of Nations Club to Hold Organization Meeting

This year's organization meeting of the League of Nations Club will be held Sunday 7.30 p.m. in Strathcona Hall. All former members are asked to attend, in order to set in the program and choose the subjects for the coming year. The meeting will also pass upon the new constitution, drawn up by a special committee of three chosen for the purpose at the close of last year. This committee consists of Philip F. Foran, who is convenor of the club, Carl Bergithon, secretary-treasurer, and J. K. Snyder, member of executive.

The League of Nations Club takes up discussions of matters of international interest, not confining itself to the League of Nations only. The Club had a very successful season last year, among the subjects discussed being: "Canada in World Politics," "Post-War Germany," "Paraguay and Bolivia," and the executive expects as successful and interesting a season this year.

Accident On Range

M.W.S. Rifle Club Correct Erroneous Account

The M.W.S Rifle Club wish to state that the shooting accident which was reported in yesterday's Daily occured on the Rifle Range during the target practice on Thursday evening, not in R.V.C. as was previously stated.

Captain Pennell, the instructor in charge, received a flesh wound in the thigh when a rifle accidentally went off. He was taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where the wound was pronounced not to be serious.

New Courses In Geology In Fall

Expect to Build and Add Laboratory Equipment

Additional courses for the session 1930-31 are being arranged in the department of Geology in the expectation of the new building promised for next fall. Several temporary changes are being necessitated in laboratory equipment as a consequence.

One of the drawbacks in the present accommodation in the Redpath Museum is that it offers no facilities for advanced study. As a result students wishing to take advanced study were forced to go to American colleges and subsequently were lost to McGill and to Canada.

The department hopes to give advanced courses next year leading to the Ph.D. degree. These courses will specialize in forms of Geology peculiar to Canada. Two new temporary additions have been added to the staff which brings the personnel up to six. The staff may increase next year.

Part of the present equipment which is now stored in the attic of the Chemistry and Mining buildings, is being sorted under the supervision of Dr. John O'Neill, head of the department.

The new building is likely to be situated on the corner of University and Milton streets, although nothing definite has been announced.

Disappearance Of Varsity Man Still Mystery

Anxiety Increases as no Trace of H. Robinson is Found

NO NEW CLUES

Was Member of Victoria Soccer and Water Polo Teams

Special To McGill Daily

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Where is Howard Robinson? On every hand students are asking each other this question, yet a lapse of 24 hours has brought this baffling mystery no nearer a solution.

Communication has been made with all relatives and friends in an effort to find a trace of the missing student, yet his sudden and unnoticed departure remains as much of an enigma as before.

So far descriptions of the young man have been broadcast fruitlessly over radio stations here, and the united efforts of the police of the entire country have succeeded in bringing to light, no new clues to throw a light upon the case.

Student friends of the missing youth have been working day and night communicating with all possible sources of information.

Jack Robinson, brother of the missing young man was in his room talking with friends when "The Varsity" approached him for an interview. Asked if he had any idea where his brother might be, he replied: "Absolutely none, I haven't the least idea where he might be."

No more enlightening was his answer to the suggestion that his brother might have been taken by force. He was as much in the dark over the case as he might have been has his brother suddenly disappeared into space.

James Wilson and Stanley Cole, friends of the two brothers were next interviewed and from them was learned the exact conditions of Robinson's disappearance. Jack had left his brother Howard in his room while he went to the rugby game, and at his return his brother was not in evidence. At first this excited no concern, but when his absence continued until late in the evening, and it was discovered that he had left unfinished a suit he was pressing in the pressing room, and went out without his hat or overcoat, friends began to feel anxiety for the safety of their departed housemate. There was no way of accounting for this apparently hurried and sudden departure.

The two friends who have hardly slept for three days were unable to throw any more light upon the case than any of the others connected with it. "A complete mystery." "We cannot explain it at all." "All we can do is wait and hope." "We don't know what minute we may go into his room and

Flight Lectures Start On Monday

Dr. Eva Will Deliver First of Series

Dr. A. S. Eve, head of the Department of Physics, will deliver the first of a series of twenty lectures on aeronautics in the lecture theatre of the Physics Building Monday evening at eight o'clock. These lectures are under the auspices of the McGill Light Aeroplane Club. The lectures will be open to the public and a special invitation extended to members of the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club.

These lectures will be given every Monday evening in the Physics Building throughout the Winter. The first two, on October 21 and 28, by Dr. Eve, will be concerned with flight and will be illustrated by experiments and lantern slides. The following lecture, on November 4, will be given by Professor Keys, and will be about the instruments used in flying. Beginning on November 11, Professor McKergow will give the complete Camp Borden course on the theory of flight.

The Faculty of Applied Science at present offers a course in aeronautics in connection with Mechanical Engineering. This course is under the direction of Professor McKergow. The projected series of lectures which begin on Monday offers to the public, and especially to the McGill and Montreal Light Aeroplane Club an extensive course in aeronautical theory which those other than Science students can not obtain at present in Montreal.

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1929.

U.B.C. AND McGILL

THE STATEMENT made in a recent issue of the Daily that there are about seventy-five former students of the University of British Columbia in attendance at McGill no doubt surprised many readers. We have not checked up on this figure, but even if there is somewhat of an exaggeration here it is nevertheless true that there are very definite links between these two universities. For years the Vancouver institution was affiliated with McGill, and then much of the advanced and specialised work started there had to be completed in Montreal. And now that U.B.C. has become a separate entity, the tradition of coming to McGill for specialisation still prevails.

Thus the B.C. old boys are arranging a get-together banquet to take place within a week or two and to which all alumni of U.B.C. in Montreal, whether in attendance at McGill or not will be invited. This dinner is by no means a new departure but more in the nature of an annual affair.

For twenty years or more British Columbia students have been coming in appreciable numbers to McGill, and, we have no doubt, have kept their eyes and ears open and formed their impressions. Whether these impressions have been for the most part favorable or unfavorable, it is safe to say that the time spent here by the students from the Coast Province was by no means wasted, and that their experience contributed appreciably to their larger outlook.

Has there been an opposite movement of McGill students to the University of British Columbia? We think that up until recently there was practically none. But this year a complementary movement to the one which gives rise to the U.B.C. banquet has been started by Fred Stone, who for a year will represent McGill as an undergraduate in the Faculty of Arts of U.B.C. The new N.F.C.U.S. exchange scholarship scheme has enabled Stone to make this transfer, admirable from the larger point of view, although meaning the temporary loss to McGill of one of her outstanding debaters and Campus figures.

Doubtless this migration to B.C. as well as to ather universities participating the scheme will grow as the advantages of such a temporary change become better appreciated. However, contacts with B.C. by McGill undergraduates who live in the East are being made by less formal methods than that of enrolling at U.B.C. There has always been a larger or smaller number of students who have spent their summer vacations in B.C., thereby gaining the appreciation of the province which is almost inevitable after acquaintance with it.

During the past summer the casual, independent movement to B.C. was supplemented by the McGill Mining Summer School. Seventeen third year students in mining and metallurgical engineering comprised this party, and under the leadership of Professors McBride and Stansfield of the Faculty of Applied Science, they visited mines and smelters in the Crowsnest and Kootenay sections. After the more formal part of the school ended, the members took jobs in the Sullivan Mine and the Trail Smelter, where they spent the rest of the summer.

McGill is plentifully represented by graduates in B.C., but the less previncial outlook that these may be supposed to possess is for the most part not made known to those of us who are still in the East. On the other hand, probably a majority of the U.B.C. old boys who sojourn at McGill return to their home province to take up their life work. Our plea is for a closer approximation of reciprocity in this exchange of students and graduates between the East and the West.

SOME ADVICE REJECTED

COMMENTING upon the fact that the Daily made a profit of seven hundred and fifty dollars last year, and associating it with the fact that student societies were made to pay for their advertising, the Privateer, an independent Toronto weekly magazine edited by a disappointed editor who featured in the 'Varsity' uproar last year and failed to pick a plum, says that:

> "If the seven hundred and fifty dollars operating profit which the McGill Daily showed, could have been divided among the organisations which paid for advertising in it, the Daily would not have suffered, but an easier task would have confronted the university executives."

Previously in defense of his own paper the editor has stated that twelve hundred of his first issue sold in three days and that in one day last week over two hundred dollars worth of advertising was obtained. Mr. Gilbert Murrell-Wright speaks as one who has not and wishes he has. The wish is father of the thought. If business continues as well as have been the signs up to the present Mr. G. M-W. will find himself in a position where he will not be able to throw stones. Personally we prefer to be associated with the non-professional type of newspaper work.

Mr. G. M-W., is evidentally unacquainted with the system of affairs as they exist at McGill. Those students societies who are not under the control of the McGill Students' Society and who paid for their advertising constitute less than one percent of the whole advertising which appeared in the columns of the Daily. All the major societies around the campus are sponsored by the Students' Council and as the Daily is also one of its protegas the business transactions that passed between them were done entirely on the communal plan.

Take for instance the Union House. The accounts for advertising that were charged as expenditure in the statement of the Union House was marked as revenue to the Daily, meaning in reality only a book-keeping transaction and a transfer of items from one side to another. The Union House in spite of the payment for advertising made a profit, and the Daily had its profits made to appear larger by the increment from the Union House. Similar instances can be shown in the cases of the Players' Club, Choral Society and Red and White Revue, and others, all sponsored by the Students' Council.

If the payments made by the major societies were withdrawn from the profits, the remaining factors would appear decidedly smaller. As for the one percent who advertised by the usual method, it can be safely said that they received just as much if not more, from the liberal space accorded them in advance stories on their activities.

We suggest that Mr. G. M-W. allow the student societies at Toronto to advertise without charge in his own paper, for his subscribers are to be found as members of them, and then at the end of the college year instead of diverting the money into the usual channels to divide it amongst those student societies which he fosters.

Correspondence

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Montreal.
Dear Sir:

The Editorial in your paper of October 17th, suggesting the mutual benefit to be derived by students and professors from a club designed to bring them together in a strictly informal manner for the discussion of matters of common interest was very timely.

May I, sir, be permitted to call to your attention, and to the attention of your readers, the existence of such a club in McGill. The Student Christian Association has long been conscious of the lack of such a vehicle for the interchange of ideas between faculty and students and has accordingly formed the "Saturday Night Club" in an attempt to achieve this end.

At various times the Club hopes to have as its guests men from the city of Montreal who have something of value to share with students, or interesting visitors from outside. The primary end, however, is to provide a meeting place for professors and students to discuss "any subject under the sun."

An invitation is extended to all men who are interested in a club of this character. Any suggestions whereby the club can be made more useful are welcomed. The place of meeting is around the fire in the office-reading room of Strathcona Hall and the time is, of course, Saturday evenings.

Thanking you.
Sincerely,
C. M. Stewart
General Secretary.

Dear Mr. Editor—

It seems impossible for some people to realize that an initiation can be staged at McGill without someone getting killed or a few arms being broken. Did you ever watch the fair R.V.C. girls going up yo yhe art's building? If you are a good observer you will notice that very seldom does one walk by herself. The reason is that they are shy and wish to be accompanied and so they wait at the gait until another freshette comes along to give them encouragement. This a splendid thing as we get the students of the first years acquainted with one another and it promotes fellowship and class spirit. Now my arguer says very fine but you are going to have to break someones arm before you will get him to wear the little cap or the green tie. Not at all, no rough stuff need enter into the matter what so ever. If it is the wish of the students to leave the matter in the hands of the sophomores they would have the choice of several ways of enforcement. It could be controlled by a court before which each disobeying freshman would appear, or probably the system of fining would be more effective.

There seems to be a difficulty in getting enough ushers at the stadium. The real reason for this is that the freshmen do not realize their place on the campus. It is hardly fair to compare a student in his graduating year to a first year man who may only remain until Christmas and yet who can tell one from another.

To come to a place and be perfectly at ease is a very bad thing for a young man especially when he has to leave here in a few years with a degree several feet square and accept a position down town at a salary that will hardly keep him in cigarettes. This life has an awful lot of ups and downs, and unless McGill men learn this at college where they learn everything else they are certainly going to go through an awful lot of mental torture before they can earn their first million.

Yours truly
G. E. Craig

Adam was toiling home at the end of a hot summer's day, carrying his shovel and hoe, while little Cain trotted beside him.

On reaching the Garden of Eden, little Cain peeped through the palings and said: "Gee, pop, I wished we lived here."

And pop replied: "We did once, until your mother ate us out of house and home."

How They Danced

Last night also witnessed the innovation of several new dances as the couples swayed to the extraordinary tunes of Stu Hungerford and his Orchestra. Einstein's space-time theory, (cf. 1929 edition) forbids the disclosures of the nature of these steps. Nevertheless we must mention the dances of bounded variation and of polarized recombination. In the former only the walls of the Ballroom were the bounds.

Next Week At Local Theatres

Orpheum

The average playwright in an effort to concoct a howling farce usually is forced to revert to bedrooms or bathrooms or pie-throwing contests for his material. But Avery Hopwood is not an average playwright, and likewise, "Ladies' Night," his screaming comedy which will be performed at the Orpheum theatre starting tomorrow, is far and above the average comedy if its reception by New York audiences last year is any indication. Few farces of recent years has attracted such world-wide attention, because as soon as the New York run closed road companies were formed in America and Europe to present the play.

"Ladies' Night" deals with the amusing situation wherein a couple of young men find themselves, by some unaccountable reason, in a Turkish bath on Ladies' Night. They are discovered coming home from a masquerade in a very much dishevelled condition. They are prevailed upon by someone to enter the Turkish Bath, and then mirth-provoking complications commence. The great wealth of fun which such a situation makes possible is readily understandable and Hopwood has turned his deft pen to get every drop of humor into this play.

The Opheum players have demonstrated time and again their especial penchant for doing broad comedy to a nicety, and because of their marked ability in this direction, "Ladies' Night" was chosen. Miss Margaret Brayton and Victor Sutherland will both be seen to advantage in next week's productions, as will the rest of the Orpheum Players. There will be a twenty minute musicale by the Orpheum Concert Five preceding the initial curtain.

"Three Live Ghosts", from the famous stage play of the same name begins a week's run at the Princess theatre today. Max Harein, playwright who produced the original stage play, likewise staged the all-talking film version, which features such layers as Beryl Mercer, Charles McNaughton, Joan Bennett and Robert Montgomery.

Three British soldiers escape from a German prison camp and return to their former haunts in London, only to learn that they are legally dead in the eyes of the government and their friends. One of them, an American, foiled in his hope for death on the battlefield to expiate a crime he had comitted in his native land, is being sought for by the police. The second member of the trio has lost his reason, and when his mind eventually clears he finds he has kidnapped his own child. The third wages a battle of wits with his gin-soaked step-mother, who connives to bring about his arrest.

These are some of the highlights of the story of "Three Live Ghosts". The producers, according to reports, have spared no expense in duplicating bits of London, of building an exact replica of the interior of an office in Scotland Yard, which has never itself been photographed from the interior. Charles McNaughton, Claude Allister and Robert Montgomery play the ghosts, while Joan Bennett is the heroine. There are two babies, twins, who double for each other. They are Beverley Ann and Barbara Ann.

Gayety

"A production of infinite surprises" is the phrase used by critics of other cities who have viewed this year's edition of the "Moonlight Maids show." The producers pride themselves on the fact that they have injected into the presentation several novel and fantastic ledas which should keep the audience in constant laughter.

The cast of "Moonlight Maids" embraces as principal comic players Billy Hagen and Anna Toebs, who are given able support by such other well-known burlesque comedians on the Mutual Circuit as Elwood Benton, character man; Harry Vine, tramp comedian; Jack Reynolds, juvenile; Josie Mors, prima donna; Sally Yen, soubret; Jeanne Rae soubret; and Billy Berning.

Apart from the continuous stream of humor, "Moonlight Maids" boasts some exceptionally fine voices, and, not the least important by any means, an exceedingly smart, lively chorus of good-looking capable dancers.

"Moonlight Maids" will be at the Gayety all next week starting Sunday.

McGill Squad In Good Shape To Meet Varsity

Toronto Team Presents Different Line-Up Without Sinclair and McFadyen

CRUCIAL GAME

by J. R. Paterson

Toronto, Oct. 18.—McGill senior Rugby squad arrived in the Queen City tonight with all the men reporting in good shape benefitting from the days layoff after the stiff practice Thursday.

McTeer's leg is greatly improved and the husky middle will be able to open his line smashing tactics against the blue tomorrow with renewed vigor.

The absence of St. Germain from the line-up has been hailed by the Toronto press with great joy as although Varsity is picked to win it is admitted that it will not be without a struggle.

Jack Sinclair and McFadyen regular blue and white back field men have been absent from practice all week forcing coach Ronnie McPherson to make some radical changes in his plans.

Johnnie Fitzpatrick, Canadian sprinter at the Olympics last year has been shifted from outside wing to Sinclair's position on the half line and will probably prove a dangerous man for Young and Urquhart to handle.

Davey, Bell and Hallam will also be used in conjunction with Fitzpatrick in the back division. Bell and Hallam alternating with the kicking duties.

Neither of these men are noted as long punters and Kritzwiser should have little difficulty in holding his own against them.

The McGill Varsity game has long been the rugby classic of the Toronto season and with both the red and blue machine fighting to stay in the running with the league leading tricolour team the encounter is of major importance.

Queens will be minus the services of Hamlin Regular middle wing who proved so effective against McGill but all conceded a win when they meet western in London at the opening of the J. W. Little Memorial Stadium tomorrow.

The Red team is not over confident but there is a spirit of optimism amongst the players and whatever happens McGill will be in there fighting to the final whistle.

S.V.M. Kingston Meet Reported By Delegates

ed out that Christianity would solve all these problems.

A history of the organisation of which they form a part was presented by Elsie Woodley to the gathering. This had been presented to the conference Saturday by Dr. J. Wilson, secretary of the S.V.M. Miss Woodley showed that the decrease in outgoing missionaries is directly proportional to the decreases in student volunteers. She pointed out that the demand for missionaries was again on the increase and that unless students recognised this fact there would be a shortage of volunteers in the near future.

Representatives to the conference were unanimous in the opinion that the greatest inspiration arising out of the conference at which five universities had delegates was the presence of three veteran missionaries: Dr. Margaret MacKellar, 40 years in India; Dr. Margaret O'Hara, 39 years in India; and Miss Archer, 24 years in Japan.

Meetings of the mission study group are held in Strathcona Hall from 5 to 6 p.m. Fridays. All who are interested in this branch of Christian work are invited by the convenors.

anxious moment to persons more esthenically and atonically constituted.

Fred Mott, guardian of the honor and affairs of the class for the year, lifted his golden head (officially denied), to announce the advent of several new faces and voices into the fellowship of the class, but was interrupted by the ubiquitous Bus before he could introduce them by name or give their golf handicaps. Some of the new men, however, were heard as well as seen in the course of the evening.

The banquet broke up in fair time owing to the seductive call of the Informal, and the stern demands of study. The class is confidently expected to reunite in the medical clinic of the R.V.H. this morning.

Rugger Team To Play Westward

McGill Squad Face Stiff Opposition on Campus at 3

The McGill English rugby team face another stiff task this afternoon when they play their last league match against the strong Westward aggregation on the campus at 3 o'clock. Despite the fact that the red and white rugger squad has already lost two games and obtained but one victory, a good deal of improvement has been made and it is expected that today's tussle will be closely contested.

With the approach of the intercollegiate series with Toronto more and more attention is being paid to the rugger squad. A win today and a week's consistent practice should put the team in fine fettle for the home battles with the blue and white. On October 26, the redmen will travel to the Queen City and oppose the Varsity squad there. On the following week-end Toronto will invade Montreal for the last game of the series.

Dr. N. B. Dreyer of the Faculty of Medicine has been coaching the squad and has shown an active interest in its progress.

A large crowd is expected to witness the game this afternoon. Although the redmen were defeated by M. A. A. A. at the beginning of the season by the score of 16-3, their steady progress was shown in the tilts with the Bank of Montreal and Vickers. The bankers won by the close score of 6-3 and McGills's first victory was obtained at the expense of Vickers, 8-3. A win for the Mc-squad against Westward will even up wins and losses.

find him lying in his bed." "We have as much reason for expecting him to return in the next halfhour as we have in the next 24." were some of the remarks made by the two.

Describing their friend as temperamentally the very opposite from rash the two young men were shocked at the thought that his mysterious disappearance might be attributed to any abnormal characteristic of temperament. They described him as a jovial sort, and judged him as not at all addicted to worrying or brooding. He was of the athletic type and last year played on the Victoria College soccer and water polo teams.

It was not known whether he had money with him or not. "At least," his friends said, "he couldn't have had a great deal."

Varsity Leads in Championship Golf

(Special to McGill Daily)

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Following yesterday's round of golf here, Varsity emerged leading McGill by one point, gaining the individual championship. McGill is still in the running and has a chance if the red and white players win every point in the last round today. In case of a draw Varsity gets two points for having the individual title. The score as it stands is:—Varsity 9, McGill 8, Queens 1.

Boxing Club Is Well Under Way

Sixty Prospects Turned Out for Fistic Practice

INTEREST SHOWN

Erection of Ring Awaited; Heavier Men are Needed

Under the watchful eyes of Coach Bert Light, the fistic artists have been turning out regularly twice a week and with boxing calisthenics playing a prime part in the workouts, the men have been getting rid of surplus fat while becoming accustomed to the various methods of attack and defence.

There were quite a few newcomers out at Thursday's practice and this brought the attendance up to sixty men. Each year brings an increasing supply of boxing material for the squad, showing the increased interest which is being taken in this popular sport. A lack of men in the heavier weights was noticed but this will probably be remedied upon the completion of the football season.

Owing to the intercollegiate meet being held in Montreal this season B.W. & F. fans will probably follow the fortunes of the prospective candidates more closely than ever. With the return of many of last year's experienced boxers there is already a strong nucleus to work with.

Fred Taylor has been hard at work and is quickly rounding into shape. Taylor looks like a good bet for this year's title. Copeman, Craig, Sampson, Fyshe, Suntherland, Sharpe and Allison are all back and anxious to get into the fray.

Both Copeman and Craig will be remembered by their last year's performances. The former put up a game fight for the 126 lb. title at the Assault last year and it is hoped that he will pull through this season with flying colors. Craig who was quite prominent last year is more determined than ever to make the grade in the 135 lb. division.

There is an abundance of material in the lighter weights and from the display at practices it looks as if several dark horses may come to the fore before the season is over.

Following the practice Thursday night, the coach again stressed the valuable training which students can obtain in boxing. Not only do the calisthenics given by the coach put men in best of condition, but important methods of defence and attack are acquired. There are no doubt many men around the campus who would gladly turn out but for the fear of being injured. To dispel these doubts one may safely say that should these men merely turn out to watch the boxing class at work, they would quickly get into the fray themselves. One season of hard work can result in great improvement.

The erection of a ring in the field house is eagerly awaited. Coach Bert Light places a good deal of faith in the practice which a man derives while fighting in a ring. The man quickly becomes accustomed to boxing within the ropes and acquires ring generalship at the same time. These ring practices will be held after the completion of the football season.

With practices set for Tuesday's and Thursday's hard work will be the order of the season.

year who failed to pay their banquet money as freshmen will pay for themselves this year. The juniors and seniors will pay a dollar and fifty cents.

Professors representing nearly every department in Arts are being invited, an effort being made to have present those who teach in freshman lectures. One delegate is expected from Queen's, Varsity, University of Montreal, and Western. One of the toasts, which are at a minimum this year, will be proposed by the representative from London, Ontario.

Entertainment of an unusual and particularly energetic nature is being prepared by Max Ford, who has taken charge of festivities on several occasions this year. An orchestra, and a few mystery features are among the tentative arrangements.

The tickets have been printed and are in the hands of the presidents of the four years, with the president of the second year as chairman of the committee. They are as follows:

Fourth year—Bob Calhoun
Third year—Munroe Bourne
Second year—Kenneth Baker
First year—W. R. Carmichael

An intensive selling campaign is planned for next week, for what is rated, in the opinion of the executive, as the best Arts banquet ever planned.

"How do you know that that's what they were?"

"Two were on the writing table and three on the mirror."

More Wrestlers Needed For Squad

Loss of Veterans Leaves Vacancies

Despite the frequent calls which have been made for prospective wrestlers, only fifteen men turned up in the High School gym for practice last night. If the McGill squad is to maintain its standard in the intercollegiate assault, which is being held in Montreal this year, a far different spirit will have to be aroused.

With the loss of Harris, Intercollegiate Champ, Berger and Gulliianelli, the McGill team is left with several additional vacancies to fill. There is plenty of opportunity for men to make the team if they turn out early enough and it is hoped that an increase in the squad will be noticed shortly.

Among the newcomers who have turned out, Fisk, a 138 lb. grappler from Colgate University, seems promising and ought to put up a good fight for a berth.

Tetford, Levinson, Derrick, and McNaughton are probable candidates and the next few weeks should see these matmen in the midst of the fray.

In the absence of Coach Smith, Derrick took charge of the squad at yesterday's practice and showed the men various valuable holds and methods of getting out of them. The men were put through their paces and then sent to the showers.

The next practice will be held on Monday afternoon at the Montreal High School.

Fencing Notes

Although fencing has been under way but a short time steady progress is being made by the squad. The newcomers, some ten in number have shown keen aptitude in their workouts and are quickly becoming accustomed to handling the foils.

The veteran fencers are already hard at work and are turning out regularly with the candidates. Stiff muscles are still evidence although a few more weeks should see the men in the pink of condition.

There was a fairly good turnout at last night's practice and the men were given some valuable instructions. Wigger, a veteran fencer who has consented to assist the McGill club appeared for the first time and took charge of the new men. At the conclusion of the practice he reported that he was quite satisfied with the present showing and that the men would be well on their way in a few weeks.

The next practice will be held on Monday at five o'clock. It is hoped that new faces will be seen among the men at this practice.

Coach Ramondi will be present and will see to it that the squad get's away to an early start. The coach is also anxious to correct small errors which are often noticable at the beginning of the season, and a great deal of time will be devoted for this purpose.

Leslie and Hilts Need One Victory

(Special to McGill Daily)

Toronto, Oct. 18. — Captain Charlie Leslie and Hilts, McGill tennis representatives still remain in the lead for intercollegiate tennis honors, needing one win to clinch the title. Leslie will meet Walter Martin in the singles today, while both Hilts and Leslie are on the card for the doubles.

Soccer Eleven To Play Cadets

R.M.C. Team Here for First Intercollegiate Match

DOUBLEHEADER

Seconds to Play Sun Life in Their Initial Game

The Campus will be the scene of a great deal of activity today when the Senior soccer Eleven and the Seconds get into action, the first string of men in the opening Intercollegiate match of the season against the cadets from the Royal Military College, at noon, and the Reserves in an exhibition tilt with the Sun Life team at 1.45.

The team is in very good shape, one or two of the men suffering from minor injuries; Crabtree's leg bothering him a little and Harkness' knee is still somewhate sore, but both men will start against the military men in spite of all this. The match with the "Athenia" proved a good workout for the boys in preparation for today's game and showed that the Reds have a very strong half line and a forward line that is combining well. The team rested up yesterday and will start off against the Kingstonians with all sorts of confidence of bringing off a win.

The cadets have several new men on their line up, yet they consider that they have a better team than that which opposed the McGill Eleven in Kingston last year. Amongst the veterans are Robert Hennell, fullback and captain of the visitors, who is a tower of strength on the defense and who will prove to be a difficult man for the Red forwards to pass. McTavish, in goal, is a netminder who is hard to beat, and whose play today is bound to thrill the spectators if he puts up anything like the superb exhibition that he gave in Kingston last year. Best and Groves are two sharpshooters that are going to give the McGill defense a great deal to worry about. The rest of the team with the exception of Harrison are newcomers, but, according to the Kingstonians, a great deal is expected of them.

The following will be the line-up for the first match.

College Comment

THE PRACTICAL WORLD

Working one's way through college has often been presented in a glamorous aspect to the seeker for an education. Even prospective students to whom making a living is not an immediate necessity consider tackling the problem for its disciplinary value. To the youth who must get an education through his own efforts it presents the only avenue to specialized training. It is he who must weigh whether the sacrifices are worth the results.

Immediate application of knowledge to industrial life is an important favorable factor. Use of new information aids in its retention. Adjustment to the practical world gives training in the judicious spending of money. Guidance in the selection of a permanent vocation may be gained by outside contact. Time, being valuable, is used without waste.

Overwork is one of the dangers to be avoided in tackling the double toil-study program. Valuable school activities will be missed, at least curtailed. Social pleasures will be reduced to the minimum.

Lengthening of the college career by reduction of the number of credit hours carried appears to be the most advisable program to the working student. By this method he can lay out a balanced schedule which will produce a decent living, provide time for thorough study, take part in one activity, and occasionally enjoy a little social life.—U. of Washington Daily.

VALUES

In college as everywhere else, values play a tremendously important part in the life of everyone. A man has a wide choice of the things he may do in college, and the decision rests chiefly with him as to what he shall do, and how, he shall do it.

If man were entirely a rational creature, he would do only those things which bring him the most satisfaction, and which would lead to his own improvement and progress. He would take only the courses from which he derived real benefit, he would participate in only those activities which would give him the greatest returns, and associate only with those from whom he could obtain something useful to him.

On the whole, it is probably fortunate that man is not a logical animal of this type. Too many of us would be driven by purely selfish motives, and would be actuated only by a desire to better ourselves, regardless of the effect on others. This self-centered attitude would, in turn, lead to a narrowness and egotism which might lead to our ultimate downfall.

Still, if man were purely an instinctive creature, as some writers believe, the result would also be undesirable. For instincts, ungoverned, accomplish little more than self-preservation, as we maw easily see by observing animal life.

The happy medium, then, must lie somewheres between these two extremes. There is little danger of being too logical, for our instincts and natural desires do not allow us to go very far in this direction. Man has tried for centuries to be a being of sheer reason, but nature has successfully opposed his quest.

The danger, it seems, is in letting instincts govern us too easily. We fail to weigh the facts, and by blind guess follow the course we take. Without knowing why. We do something, and fail to see the consequences until after it is too late to go back. No matter how hard we try to employ reason it is inevitable that we shall not be wholly successful, but every effort made in the direction of clear, logical though is one step towards the goal.

—The Campus (Rochester)

YALE'S WEEK-END PROBLEM

President MacCracken of Vassar has now added his opinion to the many others that have been offered as suggestions for the solution of the week-end problem under discussion in New Haven at the present time. President MacCracken believes that "students on a holiday are not apt to take proper care of themselves. If they are allowed motors they may stop at roadside stands and eat sandwiches instead of good wholesome food, and are apt to keep most irregular hours. Here we allow the students to go away for one week-end a month. I consider that sufficient and I believe that Yale University or any other University, either men or women, would do well to follow such a plan."

It is quite evident that President MacCracken's well-meaning remarks are better without much practical experience as to the habits and customs of undergraduates. Although law-abiding for the most part with respect to university regulations, a restriction such as that suggested by Vassar's president would not only meet with general disapproval but many means of evading it would rapidly be found.

In addition to the question of ineffective enforcement, there would be the bigger problem of an undergraduate body united against a faculty. For these reasons we believe that no hampering restrictions should be employed in the "Back to New Haven" drive, and that the freedom and independence which has long been part of a college man's career should continue uninterrupted.

TRADITIONS ONCE MORE

They're at it again! the Knights of the Hook, the Sophomore class, the student body government are mobilizing their forces to instill order and discipline in the heterogeneous mass of some 1000 frosh men.

Innumerable committees have been appointed, each co-operating with the other in one gigantic attempt to solve this even more gigantic task.

To accomplish this lofty ideal, three distinct regulations are necessary, the some 200-odd committeemen declare.

Frosh must wear the green.

Mustn't smoke on the campus.

Mustn't talk to women on the campus.

This trio of "no's" seems to be the set standard considered necessary to properly subordinate fresh-freshmen. The only problem, of course, is how to enforce them.

Several years ago, such enforcement was handled by the Sophomore vigilance committee until it degenerated into petty class rivalry that became a nuisance.

Last spring, the frosh decided of their own accord to wear the green, hoping thereby to promote a better class spirit. The movement was a flop, and died out in a few days. It was to be enforced by the living organizations. These organizations proved their inability or lack of inclination to enforce such a tradition.

Frosh don't seem to like to wear green lids unless they know there is a penalty awaiting them if they don't wear them.

The questions then, that confront the army of committee workers as they feverishly attack this grave issue are those that have caused the abolishment of traditions in the past. First, what will be the penalty for violations; and second, who is going to mete out the punishment?

Incidentally, it might be well to successfully establish the green lid idea before venturing into the more complicated details of curtailing the consumption of nicotine on the campus.

As for limiting the freedom of speech for the first-year men where co-eds are involved, well that's just too much of a joke.

"BE A FRIEND IN COLLEGE"

A specious argument in favor of a college course is that college is a good place for making friends. This may or may not be true, depending largely upon the attitudes of winsomeness and response on the part of all concerned, but the premise often holds a corollary which is far from lovely. Such friends, a man goes on to add, will stand him in good stead in later life; and with this value in mind he goes out to win the friendship of those who later will stand him in good stead. Not a lovely picture this of a man scurrying about the campus to stake out his claims before the best ones are taken. We instinctively feel that something is not fitting in such a picture, and a moment's analysis shows us why. Friendship, like the best values of life, must be sought as an end in itself, as something intrinsically worth while. The minute I realize that a man seeks my friendship for some ulterior end, true friendship becomes an impossibility. For the fullest give and take between us there must be an unshakable confidence that friendship is sought alone for friendship's sake. Can you imagine a worse college than one filled with students who are each struggling to make those friendships which will later prove to be most beneficial in the active life after graduation? To be sure, college friendships often prove to be most helpful. But such beneficence should be expected as a by-product. Don't go to college to make friends; a far truer aim for a college course is to be a friend.

—The Intercollegian.

UTOPIA

Laziness is inherent. To shake the furnace on a cold winter morning, let in the cat and fetch the comic strip from its snowdrift, a man was told that all he needed to do was turn over in bed and press a button. And he asked, "Do I have to turn all the way over?"

On the face of it such a system of doing the morning chores seems ridiculous. The Secretary of Labor, however, is not a humorist. Secretary Davis recently said, "It is not too fantastic to say that the time will come when the day's work can be done with hardly more effort than pulling a lever or pressing a button."

If one believes with La Rochefoucauld that the strongest of human instincts is the impulse to sit down, he can imagine what may be the blissful condition of the race when it is no longer necessary to perform any genuine labor. Still, the prospect is a bit disconcerting. The impulse to labor, while neither voluntary nor instinctive, has helped to give humanity a purpose in living and has done an immense amount of good in keeping people's minds out of mischief. With increasing leisure, man may find that he has solved a problem of his material welfare only to create a much bigger problem as to what he shall do with himself. Yet it may be that the order predicted by the secretary of labor is still far off. At least at Technology.

Seconds vs. Sun Life

When the Seconds line-up against the Sun Life, it will be the first match that the Reserves will have had at McGill. Their opponents are a strong aggregation and have been very prominent in Montreal soccer, being one of the strongest in their league. This fact, however, does not daunt the Seconds, who are out to give a good account of themselves in their initial match. Watson, Janikun and Gamble, senior subs will form the nucleus of the team. Evelyn in goal is a steady man, and will prove a hard man to beat.

The seconds will line up as follows: Evelyn, Goal; Reece and Smart, full backs; Peters, Janikun and Swarzband, halves; Watson, Clarke, Leitch, Gamble and Machin, forwards; Sparks Sinclair, Mannion and Hallett subs.

The Sun Life game is scheduled for 1.45.

Two or three men interested in building scenery are also needed. They should come at the same time.

Dean Corbett At People's Forum

This book, it will be remembered, was quoted quite frequently by J. S. Ewart K.C. of Ottawa in a debate held last session under the auspices of the McGill Literary and Debating Union.

Last summer his lectures which he delivered before the Institute of Politics at Williamstown received wide publicity throughout the United States and Canada. His style as a speaker is very clear, forceful and incisive.

A half-hour organ recital preceding the meeting of the Forum will be given by Mr. George M. Brewer. This program starts at 7 o'clock.
